Old Berlin hops into

the Roaring 1920ies

More than 100 years ago the inhabitants of Berlin met their guests at the left calf of the monument girl Berolina on Alexanderplatz, in the heart of the city. "Let's meet there and go for shopping, for a pub-crawl or let's go and shake a leg" - every amusement started at this famous landmark.

The gramophone or the accordeon played in the courtyard of the tenement block, and everybody joined the rhythm of a popular polka.

During the roaring 1920ies Afro-American rhythms fired the audience, every month a new exotic step became popular in Berlin's ballrooms.

Berolina-linke Wade takes you back to Berlin at the turn of the century and to the Charleston era and invites you to shake your legs.
